

How Laurel Black Design Helps Non-Profits

You know you have one of the important missions in the world.

Let's make sure everyone else knows it, too.

The contributions of mission-driven organizations have become increasingly vital to public well-being. In pursuing their higher aims, non-profits must reach farther and more effectively than ever. Audiences must be engaged to create the on-going relationships that ensure mission success.

We've helped many organizations make their case to supporters — these include charities, land trusts, economic development associations and community foundations. Our non-profit clients have been able to accomplish great things, and we're proud to be a part of that.

Helping others is a value we share with the non-profit world. We'd love to assist your organization in achieving its goals with communications tools that make your case to the right people in the right way. Please visit www.laurelblack.com to see our work and learn how we can help.

"Laurel perfectly captured the spirit of interacting with our marine life collection through her design. The banners make a strong visual impact to visitors about what they can expect to do in our exhibits and provide critical wayfinding guidance to bring guests to our front door."
